Love your Lemurs

MEET OAK, ELM & LINDEN, THE NEW RING-TAILED LEMURS AT REID PARK ZOO

Ring-tailed lemurs (Lemur catta) are one of the most recognizable lemur species and a new favorite at the Reid Park Zoo. They are an active, inquisitive and energetic trio. The ringleader of the trio is Elm, followed by Oak and Linden. The three males are all 5 years old, and share the same father. These brothers were born within days of each other and each have a different mother. Typically, ring-tailed lemurs give birth within the same time period and the adults share babysitting duties.

Elm

When you look at Elm's face, the white forehead area has lots of gray where it transitions from black around the eye to white forehead. In terms of personality, Elm is confident and eager to be the first to try new things.

Oak

Oak has a white dot on the black hair just above his nose. Oak is the middle brother and often follows Elm closely, learning from his brother.

Linden

When you look at Linden's face, he has crisp lines where the black around his eyes transitions to a white forehead. Linden is the timid and cautious brother. He often picks up his food with his hands rather than taking it directly into his mouth like the other lemurs.

The Ring-tails have arrived

DID YOU KNOW?

One of the greatest threats to ring-tailed lemurs in Madagascar is the decrease of forested areas, which are converted to grazing lands for cattle.

BANANA-RAMA

In the wild, a lemur diet consists of fruit, leaves, flowers, bark, sap and the occasional invertebrate. Here at the Zoo, the lemurs receive primate biscuits, yams, apples, grapes, zucchini, cucumber and their favorite, bananas!

When the trio arrived at the Zoo, they spent just over a month in Reid Park Zoo's Health Center for their quarantine period. This transition period allowed our staff to become familiar with the animals' personalities, and likes and dislikes. Leslie Waters, Zoo Area Supervisor, used the quarantine period to train the lemurs behind the scenes. This troop was initially wary of her and any objects in her hands. Leslie helped the animals grow comfortable moving in and out of a crate, and worked with them to take fluids from a spoon and syringe.

"If a lemur is ever ill and needs medication, it is so much easier if they will take things directly from their keeper," Waters said. "So, I invested time in teaching them to lick juice from a spoon - just in case we ever need to medicate them."

When the lemurs were transferred from the Health Center to their habitat, they willingly walked into their crates to be moved. After stepping into the crate and allowing the door to be closed, they received their favorite treat, a banana piece!

Keeper Chelsea Barber continues lemur training at their new habitat. Since they have moved, Barber has worked with the lemurs to willingly step on a scale, and to touch their nose to a target stick. Elm and Linden are a little larger than Oak, but all three are between 6 and 7 pounds.

"The lemur group is so active exploring their habitat, but one of my favorite times of the day is when they are in a lemur ball," Barber said. "The three of them all group together in a hammock and snuggle together to sleep. It's really a treat to see!"

We encourage you to come visit the troop at Reid Park Zoo!

WHAT'S HAPPENING AT...

LEFT: Reid Park Zoological Society President Nancy Kluge calls the crowd to action with an enthusiastic, "let's dig!"
RIGHT: Teen Volunteers provided a special stuffed animal clinic so children could learn more about veterinary care at Reid Park Zoo.

LET'S DIG!

More than 170 of the Zoo's closest friends joined us in January for the groundbreaking of the new Animal Health Center. Guests celebrated a new era in science and animal healthcare at Reid Park Zoo. At the event, children participated in a Teddy Bear Clinic and got to meet the Zoo's animal ambassadors. Our ZooFriendZ members enjoyed a presentation by Zoo veterinarian, Dr. Alexis Moreno, who talked about some of the amazing animals she has worked with at the Zoo, including the special birth of our Baird's tapir. This was followed by the official groundbreaking with major supporters, City officials, Reid Park Zoo docents, the Health Center builders and architects and Society staff.

...YOUR REID PARK ZOO

THE DOCTORS ARE IN (PART ONE)

Q & A with Zoo Veterinarian, Dr. Alexis Moreno

Q: When did you first become involved in animal care, or know you wanted to pursue a career with animals?

A: Working with animals is a true calling. It is one of the very few professions one dreams about as a child. I grew up on 20 acres at the base of the Rincon mountains, always surrounded by animals. I built forts and lived "outside" as a child. This love of nature and animals was nurtured with unconditional support from my parents. My natural curiosity about medicine and constant need for challenge propelled me into the pinnacle of animal care, being a doctor of veterinary medicine.

Q: What's your favorite part of your job?

A: All of it: Watching the animals be animals. Learning from them. Knowing I made a difference in their quality and quantity of life.

Q: What kind of connection do you have with the animals that you hope translates to Zoo guests or to the Zoo's guest experience?

A: I would love the guests to feel even a fraction of the wonder and humility I feel every day. If just one person, just one child makes that connection they will go on to teach and ultimately conserve the animals we are so desperately trying to protect and save.

Q: How do you try to be a role model for children in science?

A: Being a role model is showing boys and girls what and how I do what I do. Telling the story of how I - and ultimately they - can make a difference in the big picture for conservation is my goal.

Q: What are you most grateful for in your job here at the Zoo?

A: I am grateful to be able to be in the animal care field each and every day I come to work.

GOOD TIMES AT ZOO EVENTS
